Program Overview

The mission of the AACMFS is to improve the health and quality of life of patients with congenital and acquired CMF disorders by the advancement of knowledge of the science and art of CMF surgery. Keynote speakers will address approaches for assessing behavioral and innate talents, which can lead to optimal fit during a physician's medical career. Fellows of the Academy who have submitted abstracts will present current research and innovations in practice in the areas of pediatric craniomaxillofacial surgery, trauma, head and neck oncology, reconstruction and education and training. The goal of this activity is to bring together experts in their respective fields to share information regarding patients with craniomaxillofacial disorders and discuss options for improving patient care.

Target Audience

This scientific session is for oral and maxillofacial surgeons and dentists who are Fellows of the AACMFS who have come together to advance their field of practice and are interested in sharing experiences and setting future direction.

Professional Practice Gaps

Fellows of the AACMFS are individuals who are involved in developing and working in OMS training programs. It is essential they stay abreast of the decisions being made that impact the length of training programs as well as the content. As the practice of medicine evolves in this specialty, Fellows need access to the latest research of their colleagues, so they can improve OMS patient outcomes.

Assessment of Need

A survey conducted by the American College of Maxillofacial Surgeons revealed that training programs are changing and there is a steady and continual erosion of the basic science curricula. There is a concern regarding adequately preparing surgical residents for the complexities of patient care, as well as for medical and/or specialty board examinations, if the core sciences are minimized to the point of omission. At issue is creating a continuum of training that focuses on allowing residents to train to their level of interest and competence, while utilizing optimal resources based upon regional politics and access to clinical material. Consideration should be given to having fellowships and residencies accredited by the ACGME and the ACS, to alleviate concerns over the integration of dentistry into health education.

Methodology-Format

This course is structured to be highly interactive, where Fellows present five minute abstracts with a ten minute discussion period. Keynote speakers will also present lectures with discussion sessions. Abstracts are printed for reference at the meeting and are available post meeting.

Objectives

Upon completion of this scientific session the attendee should be able to:

1. Discuss challenges in maxillofacial reconstruction, and methods to overcome them.
2. Assess research abstracts and studies as they relate to craniomaxillofacial patient populations, pathology and treatment options, and the implications for changes in practice.
3. Describe innovative techniques to assess innate talents and behaviors, which may assist candidates and decision makers during medical career transitions.
4. Evaluate potential academic and curricular modifications to enhance knowledge, competency and improve relevancy.
5. Examine contemporary interdisciplinary and cross-functional patient care delivery models with respect to your clinical setting.
